

Cleveland, Nov. 9, 1885.

Dear William:

On ~~Th~~<sup>ues</sup>day evening I lectured to an excellent audience at Akron, and received my promised $100. Last evening, I lectured here to a still larger audience, on the same terms. The impression seemed to be very satisfactory.

Enclosed I send you a check for $300. Use it as judiciously as you can - paying debts, &c., but particularly letting dear Fanny have what she needs.

I received here a letter from your mother and Franky, with other letters enclosed. It is a great joy and relief to hear that all is well at home, except dear Ella's severe neuralgic attacks. In the morning I am off for Detroit, but will try to write your mother before leaving here. Love to all.

Your affectionate father, W. L. G.
